

Scavenger Hunt: Answer Key

-  Nursing uniform pieces all tidy and neat laid out on the bed. Can you see the figure hiding? It's in the cap/hat for her head (nurse's room).
-  That uniform is long, and that one has stripes, but it's the one with the pockets that this figure likes. This uniform is special, it's what nursing sisters wore. Reminding us all that women served during war (nurse's gallery).
-  Smallpox is something you may have never heard of, and definitely have never seen. This little fig is pointing to the reason, a smallpox vaccine (vaccine gallery)
-  You'll have to look hard for this next little fig. The machine it is hiding in is really big! Built to help breathing, that's how polio affected some, this machine is called an iron lung (vaccine gallery).
-  So many teeth! Don't worry, they won't bite. See that little figure there on the right? Read the story about the man who made his own teeth out of a deer. Don't be your own dentist! We want to make that clear! (toothless gallery)
-  Though this may look creepy, it was a really great tool for teaching new doctors at the medical school. There's a little figure hiding and having some fun under the foot of this teaching skeleton (century gallery).
-  Doctors have used these for hundreds of years, but why does the one with the figure inside look really weird? The name of this tool is really familiar, we hope. You are looking at a very old stethoscope (century gallery).
-  See that big chair? I spot a figure right underneath! This is where soldiers sat if they had trouble with their teeth. Who is the person that would have helped them? Can you guess? Yes, of course, it would have been a dentist (trench menders gallery).
-  So many bottles and boxes on shelves! They are from a time when doctors made medicines themselves. Some ingredients were natural, some made people sick. Reading the label, that is the trick! Making people sick shouldn't be done! Why did that happen? The figure is showing you, some of this medicine contains poison (quack gallery).
-  This figure likes pictures, so that's where it stands. What is it looking at? Oh! It's an x-ray of a hand (doctor's office).
-  That needle looks sharp, please do not fall! What is she looking at over there on the wall? There are some doctors that lived a long time ago. How many are there? Count them and then you'll know! 8 (1867 crisis gallery)
